Lively for the Police

DENVER, October 11 —Acting Mayor Linton and acting Chief of Police Holland with the force pulled all the opium dens of the city to-night.

Fred Barthold who killed Askew in a drunken row in a saloon two months ago was to-day indicted by the grand jury for murder

Leonard Chase the saloon keeper who sold the tickets by which the Kansas Pacific road was swindled was arrested to day The whole gang implicated in the conspiracy are now under arrest.

Shooting at Alamosa.

ALAMOSA, October 11 —A shooting affair occured here about 5 o'clock this morning, in which Tom Walley, deputy sheriff, and a saloon keeper at Conejos, in this county, was shot and fatally wounded by Pat Donovan, alias Shee han The shooting arose from a dispute over a game of cards The prisoner was captured about fifteen minutes after the affray, by Marshal C Welder, assisted by Policemen Davidson and Donnelly The prisoner is a thorough desperado and well known in Leadville, Silverton and other mining towns as a horse thief and a bully. Donovan was run out of San Antonio last night and came here on a freight train at 4 o'clock. On arriving here he remarked that he would like to see the sons of b s run him out of Alamosa This is the second scrape he has been into here within the past week, having been in a fuss at one of the dance halls last Saturday night week. At present he is safe under lock and key in the city jail. It is thought Walley cannot live over night. The preliminary examination takes place to-morrow before Judge Thomas

GENERAL NEWS.

Grand Parade.

NEW YORK, October 11. The parade of the Boys in Blue, in honor of General Grant to night was a brilliant triumph Over 60,000 men were in line and the parade was witnessed by 300,000 spectators It was the grandest parade ever seen in the city. The enthusiasm for Garfield and Arthur was unprecedented,

WHAT JUDGE TOURGEE SAYS.

DENVER, October 11 The Times has the following special dispatch from Judge A. W. Tourgee, dated at Erie, Pa., October 11th. I left Indianapolis last night, after canvassing all parts of Indiana. It is my opinion that the republicans will carry the state by a handsome majority A large one would surprise me less than a defeat The people are wonderfully excited. Meetings of ten thousand or twenty thousand people in little country towns are the rule The democrats are greatly exasperated. I was at Muncie Saturday night when the meeting was attacked by roughs

The preparations to prevent fraud seem to be commensurate with those made to perpetrate it The democrats have been so long accustomed to buying votes in the state that they have come to count those purchased as a legitimate majority They will have to buy them again, if they get them this year, and at advanced rates. On the other hand almost every township in the state shows republican recruits. These are nearly all young, sound business men In some parts a good many Irishmen have come out as republicans Among the new voters we have apparently a decided advantage

Do not be surprised if a fear of trouble in more than one place The republicans are thoroughly organized and do not mean to be run over by roughs nor allow any southern methods to prevail in Indiana

A W TOURGEE

SPECULATIONS OF THE PRESS

CHICAGO, October 11 —The Tribune's Indianapolis special referring to the Shelbyville riot says "If there be a spot in the north more unlike the north and more thoroughly resembling the political hell hole of Mississippi, it is Shelbyville, Indiana. Most appropriately has it been christened 'the Yazoo of Indiana.' There was a republican meeting there yesterday and as usual democratic hoodlums endeavored to break it up They were defeated but trouble broke out afresh later on The stories are about as contradictory as could well be, the democrats claiming that their man was shot by a young republican named Kennedy whom he had arrested and was taking to the station Whether this is so, or whether a stray shot from a democratic weapon from the rumpus did the work, is not known The whole affair is only another bloody commentary on the dare devilism of those northern Yazoos

Everybody regrets that there was any blood shed, but the prevailing sentiment also is it was the inevitable outgrowth of a system of things which is supposed to be tolerated only in the swamps and on the plantations of Mississippi The democrats will attempt to make a deal of capital out of it, however. Their organ here will come out draped in mourning in the morning, and Governor Hendricks will go down to Shelbyville to counsel moderation or something else The money character of this campaign can be readily grasped from the pretty well authenticated statement that one hundred dollars were sent out yesterday to the democratic boss of each and every school district in the state As there are several thousand districts in the state some idea may be had of the size of the Democratic pile"

The Tribune has a special, giving a conversation between Barnum and Crittenden, the democratic nominee for governor of Missouri, overheard lately. The latter said Landers had apparently lost grit The tariff, he feared, would lose him a thousand votes "Another cause of discouragement," continued Crittenden, "is the unpopularity of English and the bad blood existing between him and Hendricks Landers believed Hendricks would rather lose the state than see English elected" At the mention of English the main mule-buyer opened out, charging him with being the meanest, littlest man in the nation.

The Tribune's Indianapolis special says the democratic managers and certain well known officials have banded together for the congenial purpose of carrying out a dastardly plan to prevent decent men from recording their will through the ballot box. First—The democrats propose to be earliest at the polls, get possession of the line and vote, say ten thousand of their men first. Second—The democrats who shall have voted are to withdraw from the polls and gather at a place agreed on at a convenient distance; Third—The republicans are to be harassed and annoyed by being challenged, and quarrels are to be gotten up with them and with their neighbors who swear to their right to vote.

Fourth—Shoulder strikers and bullies from abroad are to follow with blows and bring a disturbance which is then to be called a riot. Fifth To suppress this bogus and manufactured riot, the governor of the state is to call for troops at the polls, Sixth—An officer of the state is understood to have already formed a democratic secret military organization to enable the governor to respond to this call.

In significant comment on this satanic piece of ingenuity, the Journal says: "We tell the leaders and loafers of the democratic party, its senators and its scullions, that if Governor Williams shall dare to turn the arms of the state against the breasts of citizens at the bidding of the solid south and in company with criminal classes, the Northmen of Indianapolis, yea, and all of Indiana, will with majesty and with might meet them bullet for bullet."

AN IMPORTANT DOCUMENT

CHICAGO, October 11 —An address directed to the business men, manufacturers and mechanics of Ohio and Indiana has been circulated and largely signed to day by business men of this city It requests them to vote the republican ticket in order that the present prosperous condition of business and manufacturing may not be disturbed and that the democratic party which is declared to be the party of repudiation and dishonor may not be given the reins of power. The address is signed by J V Farwell & Co, M C Henderson & Co, Franklin McVey, Durand Brothers, W F Baker & Co, and a hundred or more others equally prominent.

PREPARING TO PREVENT RIOTING

INDIANAPOLIS, October 11 A meeting of prominent citizens was held at the criminal court room this morning to take measures to secure a peaceable election to-morrow Among those present were Senator McDonald, Mr. English, Judge Gresham and other leading men of both parties Short speeches were made and resolutions passed embodying the sense of the meeting It is the general belief that the determined measures taken will prevent all riotous demonstrations and illegal voting in this city

DEMOCRATIC MURDERS

CHICAGO, October 11 —The Inter Ocean Indianapolis special says The general feeling to-night is one of relief from the fears that have prevailed Tuesday There has been much talk of trouble and the citizens have been so persistently warned that the prevention has come with the alarm There is more danger of trouble at many of the other large towns than here The Evening News has a dispatch from Evansville stating that at a democratic meeting at Rockport on Saturday Louis Schonfeld shot in cold blood Uriah Webb, a colored man, who was fleeing for his life from a mob of 200 or 300 democrats Another negro was badly cut while Webb lay weltering in his blood in the street The Hancock and English club in uniform swung their hats and gave three cheers for Hancock. Schonfeld had not been arrested at last accounts.

HOPES OF REPUBLICAN VICTORY

Marshal Dudley's scheme for spotting voters has resulted in placing him in possession of over 2 800 names of persons who have located in Indiana within the past six months and who have of course no right to vote The feeling among republican managers to night is certainly one of great hope and confidence on their figures gathered for the information of the committee that they have the state by 5-000 majority certain The uncertain quantity as has been often remarked is fraud If with the immense amount of money brought into this state to which Barnum added on his return Saturday night nearly $70 000 the democrats shall be able to buy only a few votes at each precinct in the state it would make a difference of 10 000 votes in the result

DEMOCRATIC BULLDOZERS

NEW YORK, October 11 —Ex Governor Smith at the rooms of the national republican committee said this morning when questioned about the outlook in Ohio and Indiana We shall carry Ohio by a good majority but will probably lose Indiana He had in his hand the following dispatch from a member of the committee —

INDIANAPOLIS, October 10

The work of distributing eastern repeaters to small democratic towns all over the state is energetically pursued by the democratic committee Yesterday we had positive information that a corruption fund to buy votes of $350,000 was distributed over the state The democratic committee has arranged at many hundred polling places to have fifteen men at each with revolvers strapped outside their belts to bulldoze and drive away the republicans About 2,000 red shirts were issued last night Poor Indiana what hast thou done?

Ohio

PROPHESYING A REPUBLICAN VICTORY.

CHICAGO, October 11 —The Tribune's Cincinnati special says. "The vote in Ohio Tuesday will be the largest ever cast. It will reach 680 000, and possibly 700,000 Last year the total vote was 669,000, and the republicans carried the state by a majority of 3,154, and a plurality of 17 129 A large vote always means in Ohio a republican victory, and as rule, the larger the vote the greater the victory. I am inclined to think the size of the republican majority on Tuesday next will surprise those who are figuring on a very close contest. There has been no campaign in Ohio in which the people as a whole were so deeply interested since the memorable Vallandigham campaign of 1863 There is an undercurrent of feeling running very strongly in favor of republicans."

PREPARING FOR THE BATTLE.

COLUMBUS, October 10. To day has been occupied by both state committees in sending out instructions to their followers. Both parties have splendid organizations in the state and an immense vote will be polled to morrow. Both parties have taken every precaution for polling its entire vote and to preserve the purity of the ballot box.

Grant and Hancock.

WHAT FOWLER SAYS ABOUT THE INTERVIEW.

NEW YORK, October 11 The Herald's Leadville special says: Dr. Fowler is here visiting his brother. He said to the reporter, in speaking of Sheridan, Grant said. He is a very sagacious and vigilant man—as sagacious and vigilant as any the country has While the conversation was upon General Hancock, Grant expressed himself strongly in this wise, and he repeated the sentence at least three times. "He is a very weak and very ambitious man He is the most selfish man I ever knew He never was satisfied with mention made of him by his superior officers, although he received all that he deserved and more than many of his comrades He was out of temper whenever any other officer was commended He could not bear to have anybody else praised. He is the most selfish man I ever knew"

LEADVILLE October 11 The Evening Chronicle had an interview with the Rev C H Fowler, in which that gentleman affirms the correctness of his interview with Grant as published in the Cincinnati Gazette He says he has abundant evidence that Grant said all alleged and even more damaging things about Hancock The Fowler interview occupies two columns in the Chronicle and covers all the disputed points

WHAT GRANT SAYS ABOUT THE INTERVIEW

NEW YORK, October 11 —The New York reporter interviewed General Grant again yesterday

"What do you think of the political outlook?" asked the reporter

"I think it good Everything looks hopeful and there appears to me little doubt of republican success"

"How will the soldiers vote?"

"Well now replied Grant, slowly and with the aid of meditation, "I should judge you know as much or more of that than I do I have heard of soldiers who are going to vote the democratic ticket, but they are men who have always voted the democratic ticket I have heard of no others

"I suppose, General, that you don't care to talk about those recent interviews?"

"No, I have no particular wish to say anything about them because I don't see what good anything that I can say may do"

"You had no idea that the interview with Dr. Fowler would be published?"

"I certainly had not It was an extraordinary conversation and I did not think for a moment that Fowler wanted to publish it A few days after it took place he wrote asking for my permission to publish the substance of it I replied that a gentleman was going to make use of it on the stump after he had searched the records at Washington and ascertained the facts, and yet Dr Fowler, after receiving my letter, printed the interview"

Here the talk was cut short by a visitor After breakfast Grant received a few of his intimate friends only At 11 30 Gen. Badeau had a private interview with General Grant lasting nearly two hours A few others were then showed up and at three o'clock General Grant and his son Frederick drove to Jersey City Heights to visit the General's mother

Hancock and Gettysburg

CHICAGO, October 11 —The Inter Ocean publishes the following A telegram was recently published in a Chicago newspaper in which General Slocum contradicts the statement made by General Grant, and declares that General Hancock selected the Gettysburg battlefield General Slocum is reported as saying that he was on the scene and took an active part in that memorable battle, and consequently knows that to Hancock belongs the credit of selecting the ground, and largely the success of the Gettysburg battle. It is a fortunate thing for truth that other officers than General Slocum were present at that battle and who took an active part in the struggle.

Among these was General C H Howard, of Chicago, who was adjutant general of the left wing of the Army of the Potomac after General Reynolds was killed Gen O O Howard, Gen C H Howard's brother, came into command of the left wing, consisting of the first, eleventh and third corps After General Reynolds' death, Gen O O Howard's adjutant went with the eleventh corps, under command of Schurz, and General C H Howard was made adjutant general of the left wing He not only kept the records of orders and movements on that day but carried orders to different corps commanders and is qualified to give the true facts in regard to the part Hancock and Slocum bore in that fight.

"Let us know, general," asked an Inter Ocean reporter who visited him, "all that you know about the disposition of troops on the battlefield of Gettysburg"

"I came upon the field with Major General Howard on the morning of July 1st. Not a fence rail had been removed from Cemetery Ridge until General Howard went out on the ridge to reconnoitre and then located two batteries of artillery under Major General Stemweber on the north end of the ridge This was done on the morning of July 1st. He rode out upon the ground where afterwards the battle raged so hotly, and said to his chief of staff, 'Here is a military position.'"

"When did Slocum arrive?"

"Slocum did not arrive until nearly sunset of that day Hancock did not arrive until 4.30 o'clock in the afternoon."

These facts are sufficient to prove that neither Hancock nor Slocum deserves any credit for the success of the battle of Gettysburg

What Gov. Pitkin Saved Leadville From.

We do not and cannot endorse the wholesale, unqualified condemnation of either Gov. Pitkin or the gentlemen on the democratic side who called for executive interference in the disgraceful row which came very near drenching the streets of Leadville with blood and destroying many millions of property. [Leadville Herald, August 20, 1880.

Barney Aaron, the prize fighter, will be one of Barnum's assistants in Ohio.

Mr. Barnum will display in Indiana markets to-day the largest stock of mules ever offered for sale in this country. He expects to dispose of them all before night.

It is a question whether the republican majority in Indiana will be great enough to offset the New York repeaters and Kentucky hirelings that Barnum and English will vote to-day.

The clergymen of New York have set apart November first as a day to pray for right results in the elections. Of course the democrats will call this praying for the success of the republican ticket.

Grant seldom made a mistake is his judgment of men. This contributed largely to his success as a soldier. Now Grant says that Hancock is weak and vain. If so what do his promises about rebel claims amount to. He will be a mere tool in the hands of the solid south.

General Butler used to say some good things, when he used to be a republican. In 1869 he uttered the following sentiments which are strangely at variance with his present position in league with southern bulldozers and ballotstuffers: "Make it safe for the negro to vote and the white man to vote for the Union for which he fought! Sir, make it safe for every Union soldier to sleep in his cabin with his latch string out, in the southern states, then I will aid to put power in the hands of white rebels, but not till then, so help me God! not till then! Then will be time for me to say that I will give power to the white man who has so abused it to break up the government, but not till then!

THE GREAT CONTEST.

The contest to-day is a great one because it may settle the question who will be next president. If the republicans should carry Ohio and Indiana then Hancock cannot carry a northern state in November. If the democracy carry Ohio and Indiana all doubtful states in the north will vote for Hancock in November and ensure his election. If the republicans carry Ohio and the democracy Indiana, then the battle will be a drawn one, and the bitter contest which has been waged in the October states will be transferred to New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. A few facts regarding these states may be of interest.

The elections to-day will be in West Virginia, Ohio and Indiana. West Virginia will elect three congressmen, who will be, as heretofore, democratic. The republicans claim one district, but there is little hope of carrying it. In Indiana there will be a full state ticket elected, and also congressmen. The legislature which will be elected will chose a successor to Senator McDonald. The vote in Indiana for a few years past has been as follows:

	Rep.	Dem.
1864, for President........	150,422	130,233
1868, " "	176,548	166,980
1872, " "	186,147	164,632
1876, " "	208,011	213,526
1878, Sec. of State........	180,657	191,770

It will be noticed that in all presidential elections Indiana has been republican until the last one. Then the democratic plurality was only 5,000. In 1876 the greenback vote was 9,000. The democrats thus had a bare majority of less than one thousand. In 1878 there were three parties in the field. The greenbackers polled a vote of 39,000, drawing from both parties. Though the democrats had a plurality of 14,000, they were in a minority of 25,000. It is generally believed that the greenback vote for that year was more largely drawn from the republican party than from the democratic party, because the former was for hard money, while the latter held most of its greenbackers by adopting a greenback platform. In 1878 the democrats had modified the limits of the congressional districts so as to increase the democratic strength in congress. The elections that year resulted in the election of six republicans, six democrats and one greenbacker. It will be seen from the above that the election will be close and that so far as may be judged from the more recent elections, the chances are in favor of the democrats. Still the republicans feel confident of a victory. Their main reason is the general prosperity of the country. This practically destroys the greenback party. It is believed that most of its members will return to the republican party. The canvass has been thorough and exciting. The republicans have had decidedly the advantage on the stump. In the joint discussion between the two candidates for governor, Porter and Landers, the latter came off so badly that demands were made by his party associates that he should retire from the stump. It is impossible to make any predictions in regard to the way in which the state will go. Indiana, like Maine, has been demoralized by the greenbackers, and its sentiment is by no means representative of the sentiment in other northern states. Maine and Indiana were the only northern states which did not show republican gains in 1878 over the election in 1876. If Porter does not carry Indiana, Garfield's chances of election are still as good as Hancock's.

In Ohio there is scarcely a doubt of the result. The state has gone democratic only three times since 1860, in 1862, 1873 and 1877. When there have been national issues Ohio has been safe. In this state a state ticket headed by secretary of state is to be elected and congressmen. The vote in this state for a few years past has been as follows:

	Rep.	Dem.
1860 For President........	231,610	188,037
1864 do	265,154	205,[illegible]
1868 do	280,[illegible]	238,700
1872 do	281,852	244,321

In 1879 the greenback vote was 9,000. The republicans thus had a clear majority of nearly 10,000 over all. The republicans are likely to gain two or three congressmen. In the winter of 1877 '78, the democratic legislature arranged the congressional districts by putting heavy republican counties together. Three districts were carried by the republicans with majorities of 5,000, 6,000 and 11,000. This gerrymandering gave the democracy an increase of three congressmen. In 1876 the delegation stood 12 republican and 8 democratic. In 1878 it stood 11 democrats and 9 republicans. The last legislature change the districts to the boundaries which existed before the election in 1876. It is expected for this reason that the republicans will at least gain two congressmen and possibly four.

RUBY CAMP MINES.

Some Recent Sales, A Rich Strike and Surface Improvements.

From a Regular Correspondent of the Gazette.

RUBY CAMP, October 7. During the week quite a number of our mine owners and miners have gone out for the winter. Assessment work, that is, work done only for the purpose of preserving title to claims, is about through with for this year; and here, as in all other mining camps, there are many claim owners who are unable to do more. Most of these go out for the winter. Our population is not more than half what it was six weeks ago. Our camp is not dead, however, building is as lively as ever in Irwin, and new buildings are yet to be commenced this fall. On a number of our most prominent mines, preparations for vigorous winter work is being made.

Yesterday a subscription paper was carried through the camp for the purpose of raising means for the erection of a Catholic church building. When I saw the paper the list of subscribers was about as long as my arm, and I was told they would have ample means for the erection of the church, and that it would be commenced at once.

The Presbyterians, a month or two ago, thought to build this fall, but not seeing enough money in sight for the purpose, since concluded it best to postpone it until next summer. They are now urged by some who make no profession of religion, to build at once, they volunteering their aid in raising the means. It now looks as though the building would go on. The lumber for the building was received some time ago.

The sampling works of Rose, Reed & Co., in Irwin, are nearing completion, and will be in operation in a few days.

The machinery for the Lead Chief mine is all on the ground and the shaft house ready for roof. The machinery will be put in place as quickly as possible. It is the intention of the company to put all the force upon the mine that can be worked.

The machinery for the Ruby King mine is expected to arrive in a day or two. That for the Forest Queen will not be much behind.

The Bullion King is also to have hoisting and pumping machinery placed over it this fall. It now looks as though this mine would soon equal the Queen in value. The ore vein is from two to two and a half feet thick and constantly increasing in wealth and richness.

The Old Mexico, lately sold by Irwin & Thompson, is turning out a large quantity of high grade ore. I cannot now recall the names of the purchasers. Crossing this is the Durango, located by the same parties. This was sold this week, but whether to the same who purchased the Old Mexico or to others I have not learned. Buildings are being erected on these mines and they will be worked all winter.

A rich strike is reported to have been made in the Burlington on Elk creek, one and one-half miles east of Irwin. The ore is of the finest ruby, but of the quantity I have not learned.

Some excitement was caused over the finding of a ruby boulder in Independence basin a few days ago. This was the first ruby ore yet found in that locality. Some think the boulder may have been borrowed from the Forest Queen.

A big strike was lately made by a Leadville company in the Micawber mine, Elk basin, two miles northeast of Irwin. A shaft had been sunk to the depth of forty feet on the vein, but little or no ore being found, a crosscut was run from the bottom of the shaft and a vein of galena ore, eight feet thick was found, four feet of which is solid galena.

Close by this is the Elk, opened by an open cut twelve to fifteen feet deep. At this depth it shows thirty inches in thickness of solid galena ore running 75 to 80 ounces of silver to the ton.

There are a number of other mines in the same vicinity which are showing up finely. The mines about the head of Elk creek are as yet but little developed, but by another year they are likely to yield as much ore as any other portion of the camp.

Besides these named there are quite a number of other mines which will be worked this winter. Unlike last year the camp is well stocked with provisions. Last winter there was not even whisky.

Our weekly paper, the Elk Mountain Pilot, which set out in July last as a neutral in politics, maintained that position save only with a preceptable lean towards democracy up to this week. It has now flopped over entirely to that side. The cause of this is to be seen in its issue of to-day. Tommy Patterson's three and a half hour speech fetched it. There are republicans who do not object to subscribing to a democratic paper who dislike so one sided a neutral as the Pilot now is. This flop is likely to curtail its subscription list very materially. E. C.

JACQUES OFFENBACH.

His Merry Pen Dropped After it Had Finished 101 Operas, One of which Remains to be Produced

Jacques Offenbach, whose death is announced this morning, was born at Cologne, of German-Jewish parents, June 21, 1819. After learning to play fairly enough upon the violoncello he drifted to Paris early in his 'teens and entered the orchestra of the Theatre Francais, of which in 1847 he became leader. His earliest compositions were of the lightest sort, though marked by gayety and ease. After setting several of La Fontaine's fables to music and a clever little piece, 'Le Tresor de Mathurin (afterwards "Le Mariage aux Lanternes") he undertoo the management of the Bouffes Parisiens on the Champs Elysees, a theatre of the modest sort, where he was allowed by the terms of his license to present pieces not requiring more than three persons for their interpretation. The Bouffe-Parisiens (later the Folies Marigny) were opened June 5, 1855, with "Le Nuit Blanche," of Edouard, and "Les Deux Aveugles," of Jules Moineux, performed by Darcier, Pradeau and Berthelier. Offenbach wrote the music of both pieces.

In December Offenbach removed his little company to the Salle Choiseul, where he opened with "Ba-ta clan"—words by Halevy. Of the twenty-nine pieces played in the first year of his management thirteen were of his own composition, and at the close of the season of 1861 he could lay claim to thirty-five of the 101 pieces played there. In "Orphee aux Enfers" (1858 9), which ran over 300 nights, he found his true vein, and between 1864 and 1867 made a fortune and established his name as a writer of wild burlesque parody with his "Belle Helene," "Barbe Bleue" and "Grande Duchesse de Gerolstein," a piece which, by the way, was amusingly mauled by the officials of the Censure. Halevy and Henri Meilnac were his librettists, and Schneider the first, most original and most successful of his interpreters. Works hardly less known and less fortunate were "Robinson Crusoe," 'L'Ile de Tulipatan," "Genevieve de Brabant," "La Perichole," "Les Brigands," "La Princesse de Trebizonde," "Vert-vert" and "Le Roi Carotte," produced in rapid succession before the Franco-Prussian war at the Bouffes, the Opera-Comique, the Menus-Plaisirs and the Gaite. During the war some excitement was created by the not to be expected charge brought against the composer of "Prussian" origin and sympathies, a charge easily refuted, since Offenbach, from the day of his arrival at Paris, had been one of the most French of Frenchmen, exotic or native. Since the war he has produced several operas and operettas, as "La Pomme d'Api," "La Jolie Parfumeuse," "Madame L'Archiduc," "La Boulangere a des Ecus," "Le Docteur Ox," and finally "La Fille de Tambour Major," a comic opera in three acts and four tableaux, the libretto by Alfred Daru and Henri Chevot, a version of Donizettiis "Fille du Regiment," which was produced at the Folies-Dramatique in December last and has run some 250 nights at London and Paris, besides making a favorable impression on the New York audiences that have witnessed it at the Standard under the management of Mr. Grau. In 1876 Mr. Grau brought M. Offenbach over to this country to conduct the concerts with which Gilmore's Garden was opened. The composer returned to Paris in the autumn somewhat broken in health, having left an unfavorable opinion with those who met him, and having procured the preparation by a French Bohemian of one of the most grotesque and idiotic pretended books of travel, "Offenbach en Amerique," that ever was issued from a French publishing house. The "Fille du Tambour-Major" by the way, was the one hundredth work of its author. In 1861 M. Offenbach received the ribbon of the Legion of Honor. He was on the list for promotion in 1870, on the morrow of the first victory won on the French frontier, but the victory never took place. That very clever Bohemian, M. Albert Wolff, wrote a preface to "Offenbach en Amerique" four years ago this month, which, however, was dull as ditch-water. There were, indeed, few salient features in the life and character of the German Gaul. He leaves a fortune of at least $500,000, derived from his light and champagny works, and yet there were few men more subject to fits of deep melancholy, in which he always feared he would die by his own hand.

"Poor Offenbach, I grieve for him very much," said Mr. Maurice Grau on his way to the Standard theatre last evening. "I knew him very well, and the members of my company will feel the event very keenly. He was a unique man, and though he has had imitators by the dozen, he was the father of his style and has left no legitimate successor. He was a hard worker and a man of genius, or else he would never have written over a hundred operas. 'La Fille du Tambour Major' was his one hundredth opera, and he was busy recently at the Renaissance, preparing for the presentation of 'La Belle Lorette,' which was his forst. He remarked in his characteristically French way when he presented the score to Mlle. Hadan, for whom he had written the opera, that he hoped it would be the first of another series of a hundred that he should write and she should sing. He was superb as a stage manager, and the authors of his libretto permitted him to take any liberties with the text. He was a master of the art of massing on the stage, and when he conducted everybody in the theatre felt that he was there. He conducted with his hands and head and feet. I remember how he put 'Les Brigands' on the stage of Le Gaite, for I was manager there immediately after. He was a man who captivated thousands while he was personally at times very unpopular. He was very hot tempered—a regular West Indian pepper pod, sharp witted and biting in his remarks about people. He enjoyed life as he went along—too much so, perhaps, for he gained the credit of being the greatest 'free liver' in France. His suppers and dinners were given almost continuously. He gambled, as most gentlemen of Paris do, and was known at the clubs for his extravagant way of living, his irascible temper and his genius. He spent his summers at Nice and had a house or hotel in Paris. He has three daughters, one of them the wife of Robert Michel, the deputy; another of Compte, the owner of the Bouffes-Parisiens, the theatre where many of his works were produced, and a third daughter, whose husband's name I forget, but whose marriage four or five years ago was much talked of because Offenbach wrote the wedding music. There is a son, too, a boy of some sixteen or seventeen years, whom I remember playing at the church benefit on the organ. The father was a master of epigram, and I believe that had he written his librettos as well as the scores they would be even more successful than they are. I remember two winters ago, when Paola Marie was to appear in 'La Marjolaine,' as a first night. Seats were very scarce, in fact, not to be got. I wanted one very much and sent to Paola Marie, whom I had just engaged. She did not have one and sent to Offenbach. It was then 7 o'clock, and soon the answer came back to her thoroughly Offenbachian: 'You are crazy. The idea of being able to get a seat at this time of the night for the first performance of Offenbach at which Paola-Marie sings.'

"He was a free thinker in music, and I never heard him decry any class of music. He was a great admirer of Beethoven and Meyerbeer. His own style was peculiarly his own, though he wrote occasionally in other veins. He wrote some dramatic music in connection with a work by Sardou, but it failed, and there was a comic opera by him, which is to come out in November. He did not like America, and the last time almost that I met him he abused this country. 'If I die to morrow,' he said to me, 'my family is provided for.' The provision will come from the royalty of stage rights on his operas, which run for fifty years after the death of the author. He is protected in that way in all the European countries, and it was the absence of this protection in America that embittered him towards this country. I recollect once asking him for a certificate or statement of his opinion as to the excellent way in which his plays had been brought out in America and he replied: 'America be blanked. She has done nothing for me and I will do nothing for her. To Americans he felt kindly enough but not to their country—and their copyright. When he came here in 1876 to give concerts under my management he only went to New York, Philadelphia and around by way of Niagara Falls back. He had intended coming here again to bring out 'L'Orphee aux Enfers' and 'Genevieve de Brabant' on a grand scale.

"In this country his first work brought out in French was 'La Grande Duchesse'—Bateman brought it out in September, 1867, at the Lyceum Theatre in Fourteenth street, then called the Theatre Francais. 'Orphee' and 'La Belle Helene' had been done before in German,—but the Bateman engagement was the first real presentation of his works. I should judge that even at a stage right of $50 per night he would have received full $100,000 from this country as his reward for the pleasure he has given to hundreds of thousands of listeners. Some of his operas have had long runs here. You recollect how 'La Belle Helene,' 'Genevieve' and 'La Grande Duchesse' ran.

"He was a bundle of tireless nerves in a body that was one great irritation to him. I have seen him called to the theatre to rehearsal, and frequently he could not hold a pen because of gout in his fingers. Yet even in America he found time in the busy thirty days he spent here to write several compositions. All his operas were good, though he repeated himself a great deal in his later works. It is remarkable yet that his last two acted operas, 'Madame Favart' and 'La Fille du Tambou Major,' are as good as any on the list as thoroughly original.

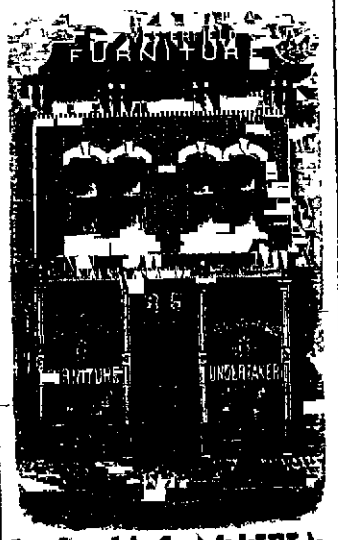

"There is a good story of him which dates from this last summer. There is a medal given each year by the institute under the will of the old banker Monthyon to the most virtuous person in France. Sardou was the orator this year and he afterwards had the oration printed and a few dedication copies sent to his friends. To Offenbach the inscription by the author was, 'I defy you to set this to music.' This was a good thrust at Offenbach and his well-known practices, but he replied by sending back the peroration set to notes and from time to time he amused himself by sending to Sardou passages of the oration set to music." [New York World.

Concerning Watches.

Watches, by reason of their fragile construction, and the variations to which they are liable, can after all only obtain a limited perfection in their performance, therefore, we must not be astonished to find them subject to certain variations. These variations, which are easy to correct, need not prejudice the quality of a watch, as will be proved by the following example. Two watches, we will suppose, have been put to the same time by an excellent regulator. At the end of a month, one of these watches is a quarter of an hour too fast; the other is exactly right to time. To which of these two watches would we give the preference? Perhaps to the one which is exactly right. But in making such a choice, we nevertheless incur the risk of abandoning a good watch for a bad one. The first watch has, we assume, gained 30 seconds a day; and according to this rate, it has gained a quarter of an hour in 30 days. What must be done to make this watch go well? After the regulator inside from fast to slow, or get a careful watchmaker to do it for you, thereby altering its daily rate. Let us now admit that the other watch has been affected during a month by irregular going, which has occasioned it sometimes to gain, at other times to lose to a certain extent daily. It may easily occur that at the end of a month this gain and losing compensate each other, and by this means the watch indicates the exact hour at the time we look at it. Such a watch can never be relied upon. The fact is that a watch which gains in a regular manner or loses in a regular manner is superior to any whose variation is uncertain, and where its variation comes to be familiar, the little companion may vie with the most delicately adjusted ship's chronometer. A skillful watch maker one day thus reasoned with a customer who complained of his watch. "You complained," said he "that your watch gains a minute a month. Well, then, you will congratulate yourself when you have heard me. You are aware that in your watch, the balance, which is the regulator, makes five oscillations every second, which is 432,000 a day, so that your watch, exposed to all the vicissitudes which heat and cold occasion it, the varying weight of the air, and the shaking to which it is subjected, has not varied more than a minute a month, or two seconds a day. It has only acquired with each vibration of the balance a variation of the two hundred and sixteen thousandth part of a second. Judge then what must be the extreme perfection of the mechanism of this watch!" A watch cannot go for an indefinite period without being repaired or cleaned. At the expiration of a certain time, the oil dries up, dust accumulates, and wear and tear are the inevitable results to the whole machinery, the functions becoming irregular, and frequently ceasing to act altogether. A person possessing a watch of good quality, and desirous of preserving it as such, should have it cleaned every two years at least. But care should be taken to confide this cleaning or repairing to careful hands, an incapable workman may do great injury to a watch even of the simplest construction.—Chambers's Journal.

What Do Novels Teach?

It has been claimed by one of the chief novelists of the day, we think Mr Trollope, who certainly has a right to be heard on the subject, that novels teach people, and especially young people, how to talk, and have had distinct influence in shaping the stream—not a very brilliant one—of English conversation. Perhaps this is a rather strong statement, and it would be more true to say that English novels influence English conversation as the Times leads popular opinion by dividing and echoing it—occasionally with a clever semblance of forestalling and originating. It is somewhat curious by the way, when we come to think of it, and by no means complimentary to the novelists, that they, as we have just said, do so little to guide or help those who may have complications of life to go through very similar to the complications which form the subjects of modern romance. This is a question which writers of fiction would do well to ponder. Who has been helped through one of these difficulties by the example of the last study of life which even the most potent of contemporary magicians has set before him? Perhaps the reason is that a scarcely appreciable portion of humanity are those who are troubled by the special problems which the novelist prefers to investigate and fathom. For example, there are curiously few bigamists in good society, yet bigamy is perhaps more popular than any other subject with some novelists. And few of us, after all, very few, make eccentric wills, which are still more largely used. As for the one grand problem of which all the novels are full, which is how to get ourselves beloved and married, that, it is proverbial, is a question in which nobody will take any advice or profit by any example. Here human nature always feels its situation unique and its circumstances unexampled. If there ever was a silly maiden like Lydia Languish in real life, demanding to be wooed fantastically and mysteriously, to be run away with and flattered by clandestine vows, in imitation of her favorite heroine, we are very sure there never was any who learned prudence and patience from the most exemplary of fictitious women. No doubt it pleases the young couple who have to wait for each other through a lingering engagement to read of others in the same circumstances; but we doubt if man or woman ever got a hint for the speedier termination of their embarrassments through those of their contemporaries in fiction. It is by no means to be desired that novelists should give up this subject which is sacred to them, but in which nobody will ever be guided by any experience save their own, yet it would be well for them in other points to consider this deficiency. They are the recognized exponents of social life, it is their task to exhibit men and women in the midst of all its complications, and it is a reproach to them that they do nothing to help their fellow creature who may have similar trials to go through. A new paper called the Reporter is to be published in Canon City

The South Pueblo Banner makes the following assertion "The biggest tree in Colorado stands directly in front of our office "

A tenderfoot, the other day, seeing the grade stakes of the recent surveys east of town, innocently enquired of those were "grub stakes"

We learn that the people of Gothic City have so neglected the newspaper there that its editor threatens to take a winter s rest if they don t come forward with more generosity

The officers and members of El Paso Lodge F and A M, No 13 are requested to meet at the lodge room this morning at 10 o'clock to attend the funeral of the late S M Sanders Visiting brothers are requested to take part in the ceremonies

We learn from Mr H S Haynes who returned from Ruby Camp yesterday that the Old Mexico mine owned by Dick Irwin and H Thompson has been sold to Mr Wilder, of New York, for $20 000 This claim is located next to the Belcher, in which Mr Haynes is interested

More tourists have visited the Peak this year than during any previous year since the signal office was established there Since the first of January 1650 persons have registered at the station and Sergeant O K elfe e t m ... that fully 350 more visited the Peak who did not register which makes the total number foot up to about 2 000

The beautiful summer weather with which we have been favored took a sudden turn last Sunday morning and a cold rain set in about 3 o clock which changed to snow before daybreak The clouds hung low and dark all day and a cold wind blew Yesterday the snow fell slowly but constantly No snow fell on the Peak yesterday but the summit was enveloped in clouds

Judge T A McMorris arrived at his home in this city on Sunday He will preside at the fall term of the district court which opens here next Monday

Obituary—S M Sanders

We are called upon to record the death of Mr S M Sanders a gentleman who has been connected with the business interests of Colorado Springs for years and who has always been held in high esteem by its residents Mr Sanders was born in Campbellsville Lebanon county Pennsylvania in March 18 where he spent the earlier part of his life At an early age he displayed remarkable business ability and upon acquiring maturity he was employed by G Dawson Coleman the renowned iron king of Pennsylvania as a bookkeeper and confidential clerk While acting in this capacity he won the respect of the whole community as well as the high confidence of his employer In 1 he removed from Pennsylvania to Chicago where he remained until 1 where he continued in the ... and was compelled ... to resort to Colorado in hopes of being benefited He first located in Denver but ... removed to Colorado City where he embarked in the livery business

Upon the organization of the Colorado Springs Colony in 18 1 Mr Sanders discontinued his business at Colorado City and was among the first to purchase property and start in business in Colorado Springs where he remained to the time of his death As a business man he became successful and by honest and upright dealing he won the esteem and respect of all our citizens In October 1877 he was married to Miss Minnie Mather of Wheaton, Illinois, who with their two children is left to mourn his sudden death

Mr Sanders was a member in good standing of El Paso Lodge F & A M No 13 and of the Colorado Springs Royal Arch Chapel No 6 in both of which bodies he has held responsible offices

The funeral will take place from the family residence this morning at 11 o clock The services at the grave will be conducted by the Masonic fraternity

Pushing the Little Miami

We find the following concerning the Little Miami mine in the Leadville Herald of last Sunday "The Little Miami lode is located on the west slope of Yankee hill, but a short distance beyond the Robert E Lee and joins the Scooper on the west It is owned principally by parties residing in Colorado Springs, who have shown a good deal of perseverance in working the property At first the mine was worked with a whim but this was afterward thrown aside and a fifteen horse power engine put in The shaft was sunk to a depth of 396 feet, when a large amount of water was encountered and it was found impossible to control it In the last few feet sunk the indications were very good, and there seems a great probability of soon finding a good body of ore The owners have been in consultation here for some days past and have decided to at once proceed with the development of the property A contract was made yesterday for two eight inch Cornish pumps which will be put in as soon as delivered A new thirty horse power engine with thirty five horse boiler has been ordered and is now being manufactured at the Ensminger & Davis works in Denver It is expected the machinery will be in position and work resumed by the first of November We hope soon thereafter to be able to record the Miami as among the productive properties of the camp "

Registration of Voters

To day is the first day of registration for the voters of this precinct and every voter ought to make sure that his name is recorded properly upon the registration books There are two places of registration in this city for the convenience of those who are entitled to register

Those who reside north of Pike s Peak avenue will register at Whipple & Eaton s shop The registrars are Messrs William Stark Clark Lawton Sr and Ainsworth Brown

Those who reside south of Pike s Peak avenue will register at the engine house The registrars which have been appointed are Messrs A H Corman C T Barton and Lucius Morley

Preparing for Thanksgiving

The ranks of Company B are rapidly filling up as the old veterans return from their summer s campaign in the mountains The members assemble in the armory every Monday evening for sabre and carbine practice and are steadily improving under their proficient drill master Lieutenant Roby who at present in charge of the command It is proposed to celebrate Thanksgiving by a mounted parade in the morning and in the afternoon the semi-annual shooting match will take place on the company s range

An invitation has been extended to the Chaffee Light Artillery of Denver ... the company on that day and a challenge sent them to select a team to shoot against one chosen from the ranks of Company ... The day s entertainment will close with a grand ball at the Court House

Western Kansas seems to be offering inducement in the way of feed and good ranch locations to El Paso county s sheep men Messrs R W Dodge J L V Irwin and C C Bestor start to day with 2 5 sheep for Trego county Kansas In their recent visit to Kansas they purchased a good ranch on which they say the pasturage is much better than any they have yet seen in Colorado

INDIAN HENRY S STORY

Further in Concern of the S ... of Jackson and Capt ... of Jackson

The shooting of Johnson the ... a great deal of excitement and comment We gave in the last issue of the GAZETTE an interview with a gentleman just in from Gunnison City in which the sentiment of the white men of that section was described We find in the Pueblo Chieftain of day before yesterday an interview which gives the Indian s side of the story which we reproduce The Chieftain says In ... Henry who was in company with Johnson Shavano when he was shot by young Jackson tells the following story ... A gentleman arrived in ... the ... Ter ... the story with ... particulars which are fur ... He informed the reporter that Henry furnished the following story Four Indians were coming from the Gunnison country on their way to the agency When they struck the top of the divide they came to the camp of the freighters At this point the trail leading to the agency diverges from the main road and leads off over the mountains Two of the Indians took the trail while the other two pursued the road to the freighters camp It was about an hour after sundown and was already very dark The Indians were guided by the camp fire and the noise the men were making When they rode up to the camp Shavano said How Been to Gunnison heap hungry give Indian buiscuit. Old man Jackson said Where is my gun?" His nephew replied that he had it, whereupon the old man, turning to the Indian said Now, get out of here, you lousy Indian whelps, and at the same time commenced to fire with his revolver, and called upon his nephew to shoot He fired two shots one of which took effect in the left shoulder of Shavano s horse, while the other struck Indian Henry in the left arm, Young Jackson also fired at Shavano at the same time, using a Sharp s repeating rifle, the ball penetrating the breast and coming out through the back They then wheeled their horses and ran toward the trail Shavano's horse ran about sixty yards before he fell off, and would probably have still remained on the horse but for the fact that the animal himself being wounded in the left shoulder, fell down exhausted Indian Henry rode on down the road and overtook his other companions, and together they returned and secreted Shavano's remains that night, and then went to the agency and gave the alarm Next morning the freighters went to Cline s station, about five miles further on their journey, and camped – Here the Indians overtook them, and immediately demanded the surrender of the whole party, five in number Captain Cline, however, who has great influence with the Utes induced them to wait till morning although they guarded the camp all night There was a detachment of fifteen soldiers under Captain Stelley at Cline s at this time The Indians numbered about one hundred and twenty-five In the morning Indian Agent Berry arrived, and the Indians after a consultation demanded the man who shot Shavano or a fight right there, and they meant business for they had their guns drawn and were ready for blood After a great deal of argument with the Indians, however, they finally agreed to allow Capt Cline, Mr Hoyt and Mr. Holmes, to take the young fellow Jackson to Gunnison City for trial by the civil authorities Indian Henry to accompany them as prosecuting witness The soldiers and the Indians started for the agency and the other party started for Gunnison with the prisoner The party with the prisoner had gone about three miles when they were ambushed by another party of Indians and the prisoner was taken charge of by one party of the Indians while the others took Cline Hoyt Holmes and Indian Henry and hurried them off in an opposite direction, not allowing them to speak to the prisoner This was the last seen of Jackson

Old man Jackson says the Indians fired upon them first, and then ran When about sixty yards away from the camp the freighters fired on the retreating Indians The Jackson party are evidently good shots to be able to shoot a horse in the left shoulder when the right is turned to them broadside and the right as this ... as ... he ... has had wanted to fight they could have killed the whole party as they were in the dark and the freighters were sitting around a bright camp fire Jackson says the whisky of which the freight consisted was not opened by them which the gentleman who told the reporter the ... states that he ... by ... Jackson camp on the divide ... early ... one of ... ... been seen ... that evening Indian Henry is told ... ever and over ... was the time ... Jackson's story is always different every time he tells Everybody ... with the whole story ... Jackson ... the two ... it looks very much as though the Indians had the best end of the bargain But be this as it may when Jackson was taken from the party conveying him to Gunnison and Agent Berry in
